

CHRIS WALLACE

SENIOR CONSULTANT | Arbinger Institute

Dr. Chris Wallace is an executive coach, clinical psychologist, and senior consultant for Arbinger. For over 20 years he has facilitated Arbinger outward mindset and leadership development training and provided in-depth consulting to senior leaders of governmental institutions, nonprofits, and international corporations across industries including finance and banking, federal government, healthcare, education, military, aerospace, biotechnology, energy, retail, and telecommunications.

Chris is an expert in Arbinger's conflict transformation process, bringing diverse groups and teams in conflict back to a state of high functioning collaboration and productivity. In addition, Chris works with organizations on leadership and management development, senior-level coaching and consulting, change management, cultural transformation, strategic planning, and facilitation training and support.

As a licensed clinical psychologist, Chris has co-authored numerous journal articles, including co-authoring numerous journal articles on the incidence and prevention of premarital teen pregnancy. He taught at the university level for 12 years and has worked in treatment programs for youth for more than 20 years, 12 of them as a clinical director for the Anasazi Foundation, a youth treatment program.